

College Admission Essay Format

The structure of your college admission essay, to help an individual gain entrance to the college of their choice, will be different from the essays you are accustomed to writing for high school English class. Your objective with a college admission essay is to convince the reader that you are the type of student who is worthy of admission because of your academic achievements in school and because you will be a positive influence on their student body. Most college admission applications want an applicant to provide them with a persuasive essay that will convince their admission board that the student will not only achieve academic success at their educational institution but will also attempt to contribute to the student population in other ways such as community involvement.

The structure of this particular essay has three parts. The first part consists of a thesis statement. The second part is where the applicant will provide details of three things about their life as a student at their past institution that provide the strongest supporting evidence why the applicant should be admitted to this college. The final part of this persuasive essay will be the conclusion which is the section in which the applicant will reaffirm why they will be a great contributor to the fabric of the student body of the particular college.

THESIS STATEMENT

Your thesis statement is your opportunity to explain in two to three sentences why you should be admitted to this particular college and how you feel your presence can would be a great addition to the student body. This is not a situation in which you can be humble but you must also remember that any statement you make in your thesis you need to be able to support with examples of things you have done while a student at your secondary school. Your thesis statement will be the admission boards GPS system that will tell them what you plan to disclose to them about yourself and how you will accomplish this task.

Your thesis statement is a very important part of your essay because it is how you are introducing yourself to a group of people you do not know so its essential that you take your time to think and plan what positive aspects you wish to disclose to the college admission board about yourself. Once you have written your thesis statement you then need to provide the supporting evidence for your thesis.

SECOND PART OF COLLEGE ESSAY: SUPPORTING EVIDENCE OF YOUR THESIS

STATEMENT

You need to provide three to five pieces of evidence that support your thesis statement that you will be a great addition to the student body of the college to which you are applying. The appeal of the example structure essay is that it enables a writer to focus on discussing situations that reinforce their thesis.

An admission applicant should try to put themselves in the position of the application readers. If you were an admission evaluator you would likely want to know if the applicant has good character and how the potential candidate could help the reputation of the school. The supporting evidence needs to provide some background information to the admission board that supports your thesis claims and distinguishes your essay from the thousands of other applications that they receive. This supporting evidence is the foundation of your argument as it provides the information that makes your thesis credible. Every sentence needs to provide information that has a direct correlation to your thesis.

After you have provided the supporting evidence you need to sum up your persuasive argument with a conclusion.

CONCLUSION - FINAL PART OF COLLEGE

ESSAY STRUCTURE

Your conclusion summarizes your argument. College admission readers will be reading thousands of college applications so it's best to make your conclusion strong but brief. You have already provided your thesis and the supporting information about your thesis why you would be a great addition to the student body population. Your conclusion is the opportunity for you to reiterate to the college admission board why your presence at the school as a student will allow you to learn, grow and at the same time help the school become an even better presence in the community and society.

The structure of a college admission essay for college admission is very important as it provides the college applicant an opportunity to demonstrate to the admission board that you are very capable of organized thought which will serve to distinguish you from other students who want to be part of this particular academic institution.

Follow this structure of a college admission essay for your college application and you will be looked upon favorably by the college admission boards to whom you are applying.
